About the Journal of Interpersonal Violence

Diary of Interpersonal Violence (JIV), distributed 24 times each year, is committed to the investigation and treatment of casualties and culprits of relational savagery, tending to the causes, impacts, treatment, and avoidance of a wide range of brutality. It gives a gathering of conversation to the worries and exercises of experts and scientists working on abusive behavior at home, youngster sexual maltreatment, assault and rape, actual kid misuse, and other brutal wrongdoing.

JIV just distributes and investigates singular examinations in which the logical technique is applied to the investigation of some part of relational savagery. Examination may utilize subjective or quantitative strategies. JIV doesn't distribute surveys of examination, singular contextual investigations, or the applied investigation of some part of relational viciousness. Result information for program or mediation assessments should incorporate an examination or control bunch. Audits of examination or legitimate cases are wanted at Trauma, Violence, and Abuse: A Review Journal.
