About the Contemporary Drug Problems Journal

Modern-day Drug issues is a peer-reviewed, scholarly journal that publishes studies on alcohol and other psychoactive drugs, licit and illicit. Multidisciplinary and worldwide, the journal is open to investigate papers that make contributions to social, cultural, ancient, or epidemiological expertise and theory regarding drug use and related problems. It serves a burgeoning constituency of social researchers, policy makers and practitioners running in health, social offerings, public coverage, criminal justice, and law enforcement.
